Whats new in the Vineyard

June is one of the most critical times in the vineyard. The plants are growing rapidly and our job is to position the shoots and train them vertically to expose the canopy to sunlight. We also keep the vines healthy by spraying organic nutrients and sulphur to prevent powdery mildew.

June is when the vine flowers and this is an important time which determines how much fruit we have and also the berry and cluster size and thickness of the skins. We always hope we have moderate, dry weather during this time but it is June in Oregon and the weather is never predictable.

This year is early and at the end of the first week in June we are nearly done with bloom. The weather was good so we anticipate a good fruit set.
